DON'T BELIEVE EVERYTHING YOU READ

The Mid Ohio Atheists group is getting credit for an ad it didn't place. The Mansfield billboard reads, "THERE IS NO GOD," and, "Don't believe everything you hear." McElroy Road Church of Christ Pastor Frank Moore says he wanted to honor God with an ad that would make people think. The group says it's been congratulated by people who think it put up the billboard. (AP)

ATF Head to Step Down

Melson reassigned in fallout over gun operation gone awry

Washington

The ATF head has been reassigned amid an investigation into a controversial U.S. gun-trafficking operation, part of a broader shake-up at the Justice Department in which the U.S. attorney in Phoenix also stepped down, officials said Tuesday.

Melson

Kenneth E. Melson, acting director of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives, will become a senior adviser on forensic science in the department's Office of Legal Policy. He will be replaced as acting director at ATF by B. Todd Jones, the U.S.

attorney in Minnesota, the department said in a statement.

The changes follow months of controversy over the agency's "Operation Fast and Furious." That now-defunct operation targeted Mexican gun traffickers but ultimately was the focus of a congressional investigation after a Border Patrol agent was killed in an incident in which "Fast and Furious" guns were found at the scene.

Congressional Republicans are investigating the operation and are pushing to learn whether senior Justice Department officials were involved. The department's inspector general is also investigating.

In a sign of the continuing fallout, Dennis Burke, the U.S. attorney in Phoenix who worked closely with ATF and provided legal guidance for "Fast and Furious," has resigned, the department said Tuesday. He is being replaced by Ann Scheel.

An assistant U.S. Attorney in Phoenix, Emory Hurley, who helped oversee "Fast and Furious," is being transferred out of the U.S. Attorney's Office's criminal division and into the civil division.

The multiple moves amounted to an extraordinary shake-up for a Justice Department that has been under fire for the gun-trafficking probe. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Cancer Pill Reflects New Strategy

Trenton, N.J.

Pfizer Inc.'s just-approved drug Xalkori, the first new medicine in more than six years for deadly lung cancer, proves the value of precisely targeting rare diseases linked to gene variants, cancer specialists and Pfizer executives said Tuesday.

The drug was approved Friday in the U.S. along with a companion diagnostic test for just a small subset of lung cancer patients. It epitomizes drugmakers' new strategy of developing very expensive but effective medicines for relatively few patients to replace the blockbusters for the masses now getting competition from generic drugs.

Xalkori, a pill with relatively minor side effects compared to chemotherapy, was approved for the roughly 4 percent of patients with advanced non-small cell lung cancer who have what's called the ALK fusion gene.

When ALK, short for anaplastic lymphoma kinase, and another gene on the same chromosome rearrange their positions and fuse together the ALK gene stays on constantly, fueling cancer cell growth. Xalkori works by blocking the kinase enzyme, key to that process. (AP)

Opposition demands Gadhafi stronghold yield or face attack

Heisha, Libya

Libyan rebels say they're closing in on Moammar Gadhafi and issued an ultimatum Tuesday to regime loyalists in the fugitive dictator's hometown of Sirte, his main remaining bastion: Surrender this weekend or face an attack.

"Gadhafi is now fleeing — and we have a good idea where he is," said Ali Tarhouni, a top rebel leader, without elaborating. "We don't have any doubt that we will catch him."

The rebels, tightening their grip on Libya after a military blitz, also demanded that Algeria return Gadhafi's wife and three of his children who fled there Monday.

Rebel leaders insisted they are slowly restoring order in the capital of Tripoli after a week of fighting,

Violent Protests Hint at Power Struggle in S. Africa

Johannesburg

South African police fired stun grenades, water cannons and rubber bullets Tuesday at thousands of stone-throwing protesters, who burned flags of the ruling African National Congress party and called for the ouster of the country's president, Jacob Zuma.

The focus for Tuesday's demonstration was the start of a disciplinary hearing for Julius Malema, the fiery leader of the ANC's youth league, and five others accused of bringing the ANC into disrepute with their calls for the ouster of the democratic government of neighboring Botswana.

Analysts say the hearing is a pretext to confront the growing power of Malema, who has mobilized disillusioned and unemployed youth with demands that the government nationalize the wealthy mining sector and appropriate white-owned farmland for black peasants.

Malema, 30, says that is the only way to address growing inequality and poverty in Africa's richest nation. (AP) including deploying police and collecting garbage. Reporters in Tripoli still saw chaotic scenes, including motorists stealing fuel.

There has been speculation that Gadhafi is seeking refuge in the heavily militarized town of Sirte or one of the other remaining regime strongholds, among them the towns of Bani Walid or Sabha. Rebel fighters were converging on Sirte, some 250 miles east of Tripoli.

The rebels gave pro-Gadhafi forces there a deadline of Saturday — the day after the end of the three-day Muslim holiday of Eid al-Fitr — to complete negotiations and surrender. After that, the rebels will "act decisively and militarily," said Mustafa Abdul-Jalil, the head of the rebels' National Transitional Council. (AP)

From Invisible to Infamous

Crittenton's arrest adds a tragic twist to the Wizards' '09 handguns incident

Commentary

On one of Gilbert Arenas' final nights as a Washington Wizard, he stood in the corridor leading from the locker room to the floor — fearful of being booed almost a year after he and a teammate had irrevocably tarnished themselves and a franchise by bringing guns to Verizon Center.

Asked whether he had spoken to Javaris Crittenton since they were both suspended for the remainder of the 2009-2010 NBA season and Arenas had spent 30 days in a half-way house, Arenas replied, "No, but I heard he became more hard."

More hard, he explained, meant "more gangsta."

"You know, like some people turn over a new leaf when something bad like that changes their life. I heard Javaris went the other way — he became more 'hood, more hardened in that way. I don't know if that's the case, but that's what I heard."

Before his arrest Monday night, Crittenton had been on the lam for several days, wanted by Atlanta police in connection with an Aug. 19 murder. He was arrested after checking in for a red-eye flight in Orange County, Calif. Shuttled to a Los Angeles police station, he was booked on suspicion of being a fugitive from justice.

The mere notion of Crittenton as a person of primary interest in the death of another by gunshot instantly has to cast the events of December 2009 in a more disturbing light.

All of us have probably run into

The Case

Charges Against Crittenton

Javaris Crittenton, left, was in police custody on Tuesday after being arrested at a Southern California airport to board a Monday night flight to Atlanta, where his lawyer said he would go to surrender in a murder case. Police in Atlanta had obtained a murder warrant for Crittenton in the Aug. 19 shooting of 22-year-old Jullian Jones, a mother of four young children, as she was walking with two men. Police believe one of the men with her was the target. Police spokesman Carlos Campos said the motive appeared to be retaliation for a robbery in April, in which Crittenton was a victim. (AP)

"This is a grounded guy everybody got along with, real quiet guy. I'm still in shock and think there has to be some mistake."

GETTY IMAGES

D.C. officials used this gun as evidence in Gilbert Arenas' trial in 2009.

Backstory

D.C. police never determined whether Javaris Crittenton's gun was loaded during his locker room confrontation with Gilbert Arenas almost 20 months ago. Two days after Crittenton grew tired of Arenas' clowning on the team plane and threatened to shoot him in the knee if he didn't pay off a card-playing debt, Arenas responded by laying out four unloaded guns on a towel in the locker room with a note that read, "PICK 1." Two witnesses said Crittenton chambered a round in his own revolver and was thinking of pulling the trigger. He had live ammunition, they believed, and might not be bluffing. Unsure of Crittenton's frame of mind, players quickly fled the locker room. (TWP)

a serious-as-a-heart-attack individual once or twice in our lives, someone we just weren't sure about. As Gilbert Arenas' father said in a telephone interview, "I remember guys going to their bag to get something and everybody went running from the park. There was always one guy you didn't want to agitate too much. Or else."

But was Crittenton really that guy? The hard part today for everyone who spent time around him: They never saw that side.

Javaris Crittenton, murder suspect?

This is a tough one to digest, especially for many of us who hung on Arenas' every utterance during the ordeal and after he returned from his suspension. It was all-Gilbert, all the time then. Crittenton was the forgotten counterpart, a foil for another mean-spirited Gil prank gone awry.

We were so worried whether Arenas' All-Star career could ever be resurrected — whether he was going to be OK after he pocketed, oh, $20 million per year — that we forgot to check on the guy who very possibly kissed his NBA career goodbye that day.

Less than two years ago, Crittenton laid his head on the pillows of Four Seasons and Ritz Caltrons. Today, he's in custody in a homicide case.

A mother of four is gone.

And the hoop dreams of a bright young kid, who as a teen once lofted alley-oop passes to a gangly Dwight Howard for bedazzling dunks, are all but dead.

What a vicious cycle. From nothing to something. And back to nothing again. What a sinister omen those guns in the locker room may turn out to have been.

For those of us fixated on only the famous falling from grace over the past 20 months, who focused on Arenas and forgot Crittenton, tragic doesn't begin to cover it. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Re-Signing Zim Makes Sense

Nats can ill afford to let the face of the franchise get away

Commentary

Isn't re-signing Ryan Zimmerman to a long-term, bank-busting, career-long contract a no-brainer for the Nationals? While implementing The Plan, the Nats have been ... let's call it fiscally conservative. Recently, they've opened their wallets — no truth to the rumor that moths flew out — to pay large sums to a lot of youngsters, and Jayson Werth.

By Tracee Hamilton

The jury's still out on those moves, but there's no question paying Zimmerman will pay dividends. Right now, he is the Nats' marquee player, without question. Stephen Strasburg could become that guy — but even in a perfect world, Strasburg will pitch only every five days. Bryce Harper could become that guy — but he's still a work in progress, and his day of contract reckoning is well down the road.

Zimmerman's isn't. He is eligible for free agency after the 2013 season. We've seen what happens when teams don't lock up their Zimmermans early. The Nats want to avoid an Albert Pujols-type situ-

TONI L. SANDY/TWP

All-Star Ryan Zimmerman will be eligible for free agency after the 2013 season.

Zimmerman Is in Good Company

Ryan Zimmerman could be a George Brett-like figure for the Nats — a Hall of Famer synonymous with a franchise. Brett, left, came up with the Royals in 1973, their first season in Kaufmann Stadium. Zimmerman came up in 2005, the Nats' first year in Washington. In Brett's first six full seasons with the Royals, he averaged 145 games. Zimmerman, in his first six full seasons with the Nats, is averaging 133. Through Monday, Zimmerman is hitting .289 with a .482 slugging percentage. He averages 25 homers and 96 RBI a season. Brett's career average of .305 is obviously superior, but his slugging percentage is very comparable (.487), his home runs are fewer (19) and his 96 RBI average matches Zimmerman's. (TWP)

ation because if Zimmerman hits the market, all bets are off.

Zimmerman told The Washington Post that if he made it to that final season without an extension, there wouldn't be a zero-percent chance of re-signing, but "If after your first six years, you've produced and worked hard enough to become one of the top players other teams would want to pursue, you want to make them compete against each other. Hopefully, it won't get to that."

The Nats should make sure it doesn't. "Face of the franchise" is a phrase that gets thrown around a lot, but keeping a superstar player on your roster for his entire career is good business.

Think of every memorable Nats moment since 2005. How many of them didn't involve Zimmerman? Let's see, there was Strasburg's first start ... and I'm out. Zimmerman has had more walkoff homers than Werth has had homers this season — OK, not really, but doesn't it seem that way?

For a franchise trying to establish an identity, it's important to be able to bring back a guy in 20 years who was here almost from the very beginning and spent his entire career in Washington.

One reason Jim Thome's 600th home run was underplayed in the eyes of many is that he spent his 21-year career with five teams. He's still a first-ballot Hall of Famer, of course, but he'll have to make a decision about the cap to wear on his bust.

Zimmerman, too, looks like a surefire Hall of Famer. What a tremendous loss it would be for the club if he went in wearing anything but the Curly W. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Off-injured receiver Malcolm Kelly was released on Tuesday, who made their first round of cuts to get the roster down to 80 players. ## NCAA Suspends 8 Miami Players Over Scandal

College Football

The NCAA ruled Tuesday that eight Miami players must sit out games and repay benefits in order to play for the Hurricanes again.

Starting quarterback Jacory Harris and four other players must sit out one game and make repayment.

Olivier Vernon will miss six games and repay $1,200. Ray Ray Armstrong and Dylon Dye will sit out four games. Marcus Forston, Sean Spence, Adewale Ojomo and Travis Benjamin will sit out one game.

The suspensions are largely the result of allegations made by former booster Nevin Shapiro to Yahoo

Sports for a story published Aug. 16. Shapiro, a convicted Ponzi scheme architect, said he entertained players at his $6 million home, took them to dinners and handed out cash prizes at bowling tournaments.

He also said he took players to strip clubs and drove them around in his Mercedes. (AP)

Ingenuity in a Box

Idiscovered the fashion equivalent of the wheel decades too late. My friend Erin is making a reverse Potomac leap, from Arlington to Washington. When I dropped by to help her pack, I couldn't believe what I saw — boxes with bars inside them on which to hang clothes.

Me: Ahhh! What are these?!

Erin: Wardrobe boxes.

Me: Did you make them?

Erin: No, U-Haul did.

Me: It's a closet in the box!

Erin: Yes.

Me: Does everyone know these exist?

Erin: Apparently, not everyone.

How did I overlook this simple, brilliant invention? They're so popular that U-Haul sells three models. The Shorty ($8) is ideal for shirts or skirts. The Grand ($12) offers two feet of full-length closet space. The EZ ($10, all at Uhaul.com) is stackable and doesn't even require tape to seal it!

I moved this spring with the help of one mover (my mom) and normal boxes. All my clothes acquired wrinkles, leading to a week-long ironing binge. I'm kicking myself for the oversight. The Mesopotamians must have felt the same way when they saw that guy down the street in a chariot.

On the Wayne

With the disappointing CD 'Tha Carter IV,' Lil Wayne stumbles into mediocrity

Album Review

A few years back, when Lil Wayne was going around calling himself the "best rapper alive," he really was. The rhymes that came spilling out of his throat were complex and colorful and wildly charismatic. The guy could stack metaphors like the teeth of a closing zipper. In an accelerating digital age, he was a rapper — the rapper — moving at the speed of life.

Now, with his disappointing ninth album, "Tha Carter IV," the 28-year-old has taken his foot off the accelerator. And the timing isn't good. "Tha Carter IV" comes after a botched left-turn of an album, his disastrous 2010 rap-rock experiment "Rebirth," and a career-stalling prison sentence at Rikers Island, where he served eight months on weapons charges.

But who didn't expect a post-prison opus when Wayne dropped the album's dazzling lead single "6 Foot 7 Foot" back in December?

Over a thundering, chattering beat, he croaked out rapid-fire boasts, reasserting himself as hip-hop's triumphal outsider superhero: "So misunderstood, but what's the world without enigma?"

Nothing else on "Tha Carter IV" comes within miles of this tune — and Wayne seems to know it. He suffers some Freudian slippage on the second track, "Blunt Blowin'," which mutates Aerosmith's "Dream On" into a club-friendly shape. "I stick to the script/I memorize the lines," he raps. "Cause life is a movie that I've seen too many times."

It's hard to flush those words out of your head for the remaining 16 tracks. Wayne sounds over it throughout, imitating the laziest cadences of the acolytes signed to his label, Young Money.

Imaginative couplets spring up as if by accident. "I touch the sky/Get the clouds out of my fingernails," he declares over the strange jazz of "Nightmares of the Bottom." It's the kind of dreamy image that used to overrun his verses. Here, it feels like an Easter egg.

Tha Carter IV
Lil Wayne

The biggest whiff comes with "President Carter," an Oval

Office fantasy that tingles with promise. The music is gorgeous but still offers enough sonic space for Wayne to flood the proceedings with ruminations on power, prestige and politics.

Instead of punching the gas, he spins his wheels. His verses are nothing more than roundabout boasts, rote tough talk and a few malformed policy initiatives. "I change the stars on the flag into crosses," he raps. "So now, instead of pledge, we pray." Then he congratulates himself with a stony giggle.

Let's pray he hasn't settled into mediocrity for good. CHRIS RICHARDS

'The Postmortal' explores what would happen if society found a cure for aging

Books

Erasing the years has been the goal of wrinkle creams, fad diets and exercise programs for decades, but what would really happen if society discovered an actual cure for aging? Drew Magary considers all the wonderful and terrible implications in his debut novel, "The Postmortal."

Magary, who lives in Bethesda, is best known as the hilariously contentious blogger for Deadspin, Maxim and Kissing Suzy Kolber, among other print and online outlets. He lives to slaughter sacred cows, whether it's the local Redskins or the beloved Charlie Brown Christmas special.

He brings that same raucous spirit to "The Postmortal," about a slacker New York attorney who gets the gene-altering cure and stops aging at 29. Over the course of decades, he watches as humanity destroys itself with population explosions, ecological disasters, and wars between postmortals and mortals.

Would you take the cure?

Oh, yeah! Wouldn't you? There's no way you say no. There's no way you could resist. Even if it goes against all logical impulses, you're going to do it.

And that has some very grave implications for humanity.

There are some big issues today, in terms of resource depletion and environmental problems, and the book is about the acceleration of all these crises. You hear about a lot of these problems coming down the road, but you can't see them, because they haven't happened yet. The idea of the book is to compress all that stuff into a very short time-frame, and it looks spectacularly awful, like a car wreck you can't stop looking at.

PATRICK SERENGLIAN

Bethesda resident Drew Magary blogs for Deadspin and contributes to Maxim.

You manage to balance that bleak outcome with some sly humor.

It can definitely be a dark subject, so you have to put some humor in there. Most of the stuff I write online is comedic, so I can't help but have some comic flourishes throughout. It's just my style. I'm not sure if the tone would work for some people, but when you're faced with a lot of things that are unrelentingly bad, people tend to take it with a bit of good humor. You just can't live any other way.

How was writing this novel different from your online work?

I think writing a book is really daunting. If you think about having to write 300 pages, you just want to kill yourself because it sounds so hard. So you treat it the way you would treat a blog, as something you update every day. Eventually, after about 100 days or so, you have a working manuscript. It's like a big pile of firewood. You have to think of it one log at a time instead of trying to carry the whole pile at once. STEPHEN M. DEUSNER

NBC Puts Olympics Online

Television

For the first time, NBC plans to show every event from London's 2012 Olympics live in some form — even if it's just raw video streaming online.

The prime-time broadcasts will still use that traditional formula of human-interest features and taped competition, but it will no longer be the first chance viewers have to watch who wins the gold. Former NBC Sports Group head Dick Ebersol, who resigned in May, was adamant that showing events live during the day would hurt ratings.

But to Mark Lazarus, who replaced Ebersol atop NBC Sports Group, the sports fan of today demands immediacy — and that doesn't have to be mutually exclusive to highly stylized broadcasts aired when people are most likely to be sitting in front of the TV.

"I believe in that, and that will be some philosophical shift from my predecessor," Lazarus says. (AP)

Party Like It's 1991: Twenty years after TV viewers were introduced to the British comedy phenomenon "Absolutely Fabulous," BBC America and Logo have struck a deal to bring it back. The two cable channels will launch three all-new specials, with writer-star Jennifer Saunders, left, and her counterpart Joanna Lumley reprising their iconic roles as Edina Monsoon and Patsy Stone, respectively. 'Dark Matters' looks at some of history's oddest experiments

Investigation

SCI 10:00 The notion that "science can go too far" has been around as long as there have been scientists. And it has informed novels and movies including "Frankenstein" and "The Fly." Now the Science Channel explores some questionable experiments with the new series "Dark Matters: Twisted but True," hosted by "Fringe" star John Noble.

Using computer graphics, "Dark" revisits some of the more gruesome and questionable chapters in scientific history, including interspecies crossbreeding, official zombie hunts and that old horror movie chestnut, the head transplant.

The first hour revisits the early years of the Soviet Union, when scientist Dr. Ilya Ivanov hoped to create a race of super-soldiers by breeding ape-human mutants. "Dark Matters" also features a self-described UFO expert who contends that the military still has not come clean about its experiments involving invisibility.

Just to prove that not all of these adventures in weird science come from the fringe, "Dark Matters" looks into some of the creepier laboratory adventures of America's greatest inventor, Thomas Edison.

Look for stories straight out of pulp fiction in later installments, including the man who stole Einstein's brain, Nazi experiments in anti-gravity, the psychic arms race during the Cold War and efforts to raise the dead. And you thought the invention of Viagra was diabolical!

Recipe File*HIBISCUS RASPBERRY ICE POPS*Ingredients

- 2 cups agua de jamaica (sold at many Latino groceries)
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 4 cups raspberries, fresh or frozen

Makes 8 to 10 servings

Combine agua de jamaica and 1/3 cup of sugar in a saucepan. Cook over medium, stirring until sugar dissolves. Let cool; refrigerate until chilled.

Mix raspberries with the remaining 1/3 cup sugar and let sit until berries release juices, about 30 minutes.

Divide berries and juices evenly among molds, then pour in agua de jamaica mixture, dividing it evenly among the molds. If using conventional molds, snap on the lid and freeze until solid, about five hours. If using glasses or other unconventional molds, freeze until pops are beginning to set (1 1/2 to two hours), then insert sticks and freeze until solid, four to five hours. "PALETAS: AUTHENTIC RECIPES FOR MEXICAN ICE POPS, SHAVED ICE & AGUAS FRESCAS"

Pop Culture

Freeze your own icy treats to keep sweet and cool during the last days of summer

It's counterintuitive, but Popsicles started out as a winter surprise.

Around 1900, 11-year-old San Franciscan Frank Epperson left a fruity soda outside during atypical subzero temperatures. The next day, he discovered the ice pop formula now mass-marketed as the Popsicle. Since then, countless kids have licked and liked pops.

Though Epperson trademarked the name (hence why you risk a lawsuit if you don't call your homemade ones just pops), the icy desserts have matured from syrupy and sugar-infused to sophisticated. Think combos such as spicy pineapple or Carolina sweet tea.

"The key to a good pop is fresh ingredients," says Brian Sykora, co-owner of D.C.'s Pleasant Pops food truck. "We buy our fruit and dairy locally and rotate through ingredients based on season. Now we're using peaches and cantaloupe."

Sykora and business partner Roger Horowitz started Pleasant Pops in 2010, selling versions of the traditional Mexican paleta, a bar on a stick formed of fresh frozen fruit. The duo hawk theirs from a food truck that travels daily from McPherson Square to Mount Pleasant to Georgetown, spreading savory pops such as cucumber-chile and sweet ones like chongos, which mesh cream and cinnamon.

DIYing 'sicles is easy. Simply puree fruit, veggies and flavorings in a blender, keeping in mind that softer, riper produce works best. If you're using harder fruits or veggies — say, apples — cook them before blending. Then, add sugar (for a richer flavor, saute fruit with sugar first). Then, pour the liquid into molds (see below for ideas) and freeze for four to five hours. (See recipe, right, for guidance.)

Pops look cheerier when they are shaped like a robot or boat, thanks to Cuisipro's molds ($10 for six, Hill's Kitchen, 713 D St. SE; 202-543-1997).

A quick-to-cool aluminum interior means the Zoku Duo Quick Pop Maker ($36, Williams-sonoma.com) creates frozen treats in seven minutes.

— APAROO.WORDPRESS.COM REACTS AFTER SEEING THE PREVIEW TRAILER FOR SEASON 4 OF "SOA," WHICH STARTS WITH A 90-MINUTE PREMIERE ON SEPT. 6.

"Any man that would stand up to the liberal attacks like Dick Cheney did is a patriot in my book. In contrast, look at what we have for a VP today. I wish him all the luck in the world."

— A COMMENTER AT DAILYCALLER.COM SUPPORTS THE FORMER VICE PRESIDENT ON THE DAY THAT HIS NEW BOOK, "IN MY TIME: A PERSONAL AND POLITICAL MEMOIR" — WHICH FORMER SECRETARY OF STATE COLIN POWELL SAID WAS FULL OF "CHEAP SHOTS" — WAS RELEASED.

"This wasn't specifically created to commemorate the new Martin Luther King Jr. Memorial, but, nonetheless, it's a sign that perhaps commercialism has gone too far."

— DCENTRIC.WAMU.ORG THINKS THE "MARTIN LOOFAH KING" EXFOLIATING GLOVE IS MILDLY INAPPROPRIATE.

Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A new play will require you to adjust your expectations. Be willing to engage in some give-and-take with those in charge.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll be encouraged by the decision someone at home has recently made. Progress quickens as efforts become more efficient, streamlined.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Working within your schedule should not be difficult, and you may actually be able to cut some time off a routine event.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You should be able to anticipate obstacles with greater clarity throughout the day. A personal conflict is not likely to materialize.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You may want to sit down and think carefully about what you are doing and why. Your aspirations may actually be leading you astray.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You have questions that must be answered before progress can be made, but you can accelerate your preparations beforehand.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) It's time to shift your efforts into a higher gear, and you have done everything you need to do to work at a quicker pace.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Anticipate the reactions others may have to your work; some will want to jump on the bandwagon, but others may prove quite resistant.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It is possible to have too much of a good thing — though with a little self-control, you can keep things from getting out of hand.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Someone in charge may be putting his or her personal priorities above the priorities of the team — and it's up to you to point this out.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Follow another closely and you'll see just where you might have gone if you had pursued a path on your own.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may not fully understand the meaning of certain messages, but those that are clear warnings ought to get the attention they deserve.
